

HANNA'S UNRIVALLED SHOW.

"SAPHO" WILL NOT GO ON WITNESS STAND.

Case Against Olga Netherese Sole Finished--Summing-Up To-Morrow.

Smiling up into the face of her tall brother, Olga Netherese gazed into Judge Furman's court promptly at 10 o'clock this morning. Louis Netherese beamed down at the gayly dressed young woman on his arm.

At the counsel table Miss Netherese greeted several dramatic critics and actresses. The rest of the end of the table, Mr. Netherese beside her, her secretary, Miss Clayton, just beyond, Mr. Netherese and behind Miss Netherese, and her brother, Manager Marcus Mayer and Mr. Charles Burnham sat further back in the enclosure.

The courtroom was crowded and the presence of many women gave color to the assemblage.

THE FIRST WITNESS.

Henry Brevoort Kane, of 23 West Twenty-sixth street, was the first witness. He wore a snuff-colored suit and tan gloves. His hair was colored, like his mother's, and he had a straight line after each snappy answer. Mr. Kane was a nervous witness and not voluble.

If Mr. Kane paid to see the show he didn't get his money's worth, judging from the things he failed to see.

"Won't you please tell us what you saw when Sapho was placed on the pedestal?" asked the District Attorney.

"I didn't notice how she got up."

Q. What did she do up there? A. She recited poetry.

Q. How was she dressed? A. In a loose white garment.

Q. When Sapho met Jean Gaussin, what did she do? A. She grabbed him with a feline embrace.

"Strike out that word 'feline'!" snapped Judge Furman.

THE LOVE SCENE.

By slow degrees he got along to where Sapho sat in Jean's lap.

Q. What did they do? A. They put their arms about each other.

Q. What else? A. Well, these actions were very loving.

"Strike that out," ruled Judge Furman, and turning to the witness he added abruptly: "What you might consider loving might appear a very ordinary affair to another person."

MR. INGLIS TESTIFIES.

W. O. Inglis, a reporter, was next sworn.

This is the witness's description of what he saw:

"I saw a fancy ball depicted. There were much laughter and shouting, dancing and moving about in the studio, the staircase and the balcony. Dechelette, Uncle Cesarine and Jean Gaussin moved about in the throng. Gaussin announced the arrival of Fanny Le Grande. Dechelette called to her. 'My dress,' she shouted, explaining delay. 'I don't mind that,' he shouted back. 'You're getting prouder,' he remarked when she came down the stairs. Fanny was seated in a Grecian chair of ivory, thin, white, clinging stuff. It clung to the form and revealed its outline when she moved.

"Are you going to recite?" asked Dechelette. "Something about love." "If Fanny tells us all she knows of love, the Venus of Milo will blush." "We'll take down the Venus!" some shouted.

SOUNDS OF KISSING.

The statue was removed. Then the stage was darkened. Sounds of kissing came from the balcony. The lights went up and the pedestal was empty.

Q. What was the next action you observed? A. As she uttered the words she turned toward him.

Q. What was the next action you observed? A. As she uttered the words she turned toward him.

Q. What was the next action you observed? A. As she uttered the words she turned toward him.

FRAUD BORN IN A CHURCH.

Miller Swindle Began in Dr. Meredith's Church, Prosecutor Declared.

JURY COMPLETED.

The jury was completed just before noon. The last two jurors selected were Albert Palmer, a real estate man, of 22 Hamburg avenue, and Louis Wolfe, a stock agent, of 25 Stuyvesant street.

Mr. Clarke, who is prosecuting Miller in person, announced this during today's session of the Miller trial.

Cecil Leslie, press agent of the gigantic swindle, is believed to have agreed to turn State's evidence against Miller.

Mr. Clarke, on resuming his speech after recess, told the jury that Miller never went to the trouble of keeping a book of accounts showing alleged operations in Wall street. He depended entirely on a sly tongue and the dense ignorance of his dupes, not one of whom had the faintest idea what magic Miller employed to make such vast profits for himself.

There was an inquiry by Dr. Meredith's church into Miller's business as early as last May, said Mr. Clarke, "Miller was called before the committee and questioned. He answered some questions and decided to answer others. The committee told him that if he must stop it or leave the church. He promised to discontinue the business, but it was too late. He couldn't turn back and after a little while he was a swindler then."

"There was a cash book showing only the amounts taken in and the amounts paid out each day. In Miller's own hand. This was all the assigned selected by Miller got from him. There were hundreds of thousands of dollars represented in an aggregate of $1,500,000, and this was Miller's crude bookkeeping system."

Mr. Clarke spoke of Miller's receipt in getting any bank to take his account, his cashier of one bank telling him he didn't know Miller.

"On Nov. 9 a check—not the first of its kind—was made out to the order of Edward Schaeffer for $10,000, and that check was cashed by the counter of the Wells Fargo & Co. bank by Robert A. Ammon, one of the counsel here. Thinkers were getting hot. The services of a criminal lawyer were needed."

The prosecutor said he could show that Miller bought nearly $100,000 worth of United States Government bonds just before the crash and drew out the $100,000 to the Wells Fargo bank, thus having about $200,000. Then he exclaimed dramatically:

"WATCH THAT MONEY."

"Keep your eye on it, gentlemen, and you will find it a day or two afterward in the office of Col. Robert A. Ammon."

About this time Mr. Ammon got another check for $10,000. "I don't know what it was for. Let me suppose for legal services."

Miller always carried his money in a suitcase. This bag went over to Mr. Ammon's office November 24. Mr. Ammon is a criminal lawyer, and I check it was paid for legal services."

Mr. Clarke finished his opening address at 3:30 this afternoon and immediately called Mrs. Catherine Moser, a witness against Miller, to the stand.

After court adjourned for the day, Col. Robert Ammon made a scene in court. During District Attorney Clarke's opening he was alluded to in scathing terms and strove several times to arise to deny Mr. Clarke's statements.

Mr. House, associated with him in the defense of Miller, held him down.

After the adjournment he indulged in a war of words with House and declared, "I'll get even with Clarke yet."

OTIS'S LATEST PLAN.

Approves System of Autonomous Municipal Governments for the Philippines.

MANILA, April 4.—Major-General Otis has approved a system of autonomous municipal governments for the Philippine Islands, under a native Board to be presided over by Cayetano Arellano, President of the Audiencia.

Surfage will be determined by the payment of small taxes or ability to write and speak English and Spanish. All the officers are elective. The elections must wear allegiance, the municipalities are granted latitude in their own affairs, their only superior authority being the American Provincial and Military Governor.

Gen. Otis appeals to the Filipinos to surrender their new privileges.

DEWEY IS PEOPLE'S CANDIDATE, HE SAYS.

Mrs. Dewey will bring to her husband's aid, if he decides to become an active candidate, both wealth and power. She is a rich woman in her own name and her family is rich.

Her brother, John R. McLean, who obeys her least wish, is the dominant factor in Ohio politics. He would be a powerful ally in the fight. In addition Mrs. Dewey has been for years a most hospitable hostess in Washington and has made innumerable friends, many of them politicians of national fame and influence.

"IT'S DEWEY'S BUSINESS, NOT MINE."—CLEVELAND.

(Special to The Evening World.)

PRINCETON, April 4.—If one of Uncle Sam's thirteen guns had been fired in front of the Cleveland mansion this morning it would not have caused greater surprise than was shown by Mr. Cleveland's face when he read The World's headline that Admiral Dewey had announced himself a candidate for the Presidency.

Mr. Cleveland read the article, then said in his blunt way, "All this is Admiral Dewey's business and not mine."

The sentiments of Admiral Dewey and Mr. Cleveland on important public questions are not far apart, according to a prominent friend of both who lives in Princeton.

When Dewey stopped at Princeton and talked to the students in his way from the New York celebration, no one made greater efforts to have the Admiral talk to the university boys than Mr. Cleveland. "The ex-President has a strong antipathy to Mr. Bryan's doctrines," said one of his nearest friends, "and he is very likely to declare for Admiral Dewey."

According to friends of Mr. Cleveland here, he is very desirous of taking a more active part in the councils of the Democratic party than has been his since the free silver cause started and Dewey's candidacy affords him the opportunity.

But don't you think the Admiral would be an acceptable candidate to either party?" persisted the reporter.

"Oh, you must excuse me; please leave me out of it."

And that is all Mr. Morton would say. The reporter next found Thomas B. Reed.

The ex-Speaker bowed very politely when he learned the reporter's mission and then with a smile said: "You will please excuse me. I have nothing to say."

Gen. Benjamin F. Tracy was found at his office.

"What do you think of Admiral Dewey's candidacy?" asked the reporter. The General scarcely waited to hear the finish of the sentence. At the mention of Dewey's name he waved the question aside and hastening toward his private office, remarked:

"Nothing to say."

Augustus Van Wyck, brother of the Mayor, and the defeated Democratic candidate for Governor and friend of Richard Croker, sidestepped very lively when questioned.

"Excuse me," he pleaded. "Glad to see you, but nothing to say about the Admiral."

The Honor the Mayor was equally dumb.

John G. Carlisle, ex-Secretary of the Treasury, also took flight at the subject. "Too busy," was his excuse.

Many politicians generally appeared anxious to dodge the subject. They were as fearful of it as if the Admiral were sending a shower of shells among them.

PORTO RICAN MAY LAND.

Secretary Gage Orders Jorge Cruz's Release Subject to Possible Future Deportation.

WASHINGTON, April 4.—Secretary Gage today passed upon the case of Jorge Cruz, a native of Porto Rico, who was detained at Ellis Island, New York, and ordered deported on the charge that he had violated the contract labor laws. In his telegram to the Commissioner of Immigration at New York Secretary Gage said:

"You will allow Jorge Cruz to land, the Department reserving the right to deport him at any time within one year and to bring suit for $100 penalty against the person or corporation assisting, encouraging or soliciting him to come under contract."

"This being an isolated case, public interests are not affected by allowing him to land subject to future deportation."

JORGE CRUZ ADMITTED.

Government Dodged Test on Porto Rico's Constitutional Standstill.

Commissioner of Immigration Fitchie, afternoon announced that the Treasury Department had decided to reverse the decision of the Board of Special Inquiry in the case of Jorge Cruz.

Cruz arrived from Porto Rico yesterday. Objection was made to his landing by a representative of organized labor.

Cruz admitted that he was under contract to a New York enterprise and voluntarily applied to the Board of Special Inquiry a duly executed agreement made in San Juan.

This was drawn to test the Contract Labor law as between Porto Rico and the United States, with a view of ascertaining the question as to whether Porto Rico is or is not a portion of the United States.

The Treasury Department, not caring to enter into the controversy and to deal a test case, ordered the young man admitted, but reserved the right to act differently in subsequent cases of a similar character.

"Union-made" is the aristocracy of clothing. Union wages are the highest wages. Union conditions are the strictest in sanitary matters—and therefore the safest. We are strictly a union shop. Our custom tailoring business is bigger than ever, but it is now only a very small part of our total. We manufacture much ready-made clothing for our business here, for our business in the West and for wholesale. And from the first snip of the shears to the last touch of the pressing iron not a man can put a finger to our goods except a trained, skilled union man at full union wages. This must not be understood as in any sense a bid for union trade—though we are as glad to wait upon union men as to employ them. It is a simple statement of the facts, put forth to show that our astoundingly low prices do not mean underpaid work or anything less than the very highest grade of work—that the interest of the customer is not permitted to suffer. The low prices are due FIRST to our immense cloth purchases and SECOND to our determination to sacrifice profit for the present in order to command a quicker and larger success.
